

Arabian Gulf University

College of Medicine and Health Sciences

Qualifications and Experiences:

- A PhD or an equivalent degree (board certificate fellowship) from a recognized institution. +
- Previous teaching experience, preferably at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels.
- Strong research background with a track record of scholarly contributions in the field of specialization.
- Commitment to ongoing professional development and staying current with advances in the field of specialization.
- Preferably, having a qualification in medical education.

Job Responsibilities:

- Teaching, mentorship, and guidance of undergraduate (and postgraduate if needed) learners in their academic and professional development.
- Facilitating small group learning sessions (e.g., problem-based learning, bed-side teaching, etc.).
- Participating in student assessment activities.
- Conducting discipline-specific research.
- Serving as an advisor or supervisor for learners' research projects, dissertations, or other scholarly activities.

- Participating in departmental and institutional committees.
- Collaborating with colleagues on educational quality improvement projects and accreditation processes.
- Engaging in service activities that contribute to the department, institution, and the broader community.

Benefits: Salary and allowances are Competitive